President Goes On A Quiet Jaunt

Slips Away From His Official Duties.

WINDS UP AT FARM HOUSE

Washington, July 31.—One of President Taft's human traits has just been given a demonstration after having been kept secret several weeks. It is his interest in common affairs of life and the pleasure he derives from meeting the "man in the street."

One Sunday afternoon recently it was learned the president slipped away from the humdrum of official affairs at the White House, visited a Washington newspaper reporter's farm in Maryland, completely surprising the owner, and spent the afternoon sitting on the front porch chatting with the farmer, his wife and neighbors, drinking milk, viewing cow and crops and sympathizing with a yellow pup that had lost the use of both hind legs.

William P. Price, a reporter on a local paper, whose work brings him into contact frequently with the president, is the "farmer." On this particular Sunday afternoon Mr. Price's neighbors on the east had dropped in to have a little talk. So also had the folks who run the farm on the west. The reporter-farmer was coatless, his shirt unbuttoned at the neck and hung open to the breezes. One talus was where it ought to be and the other dangled at his side. Home and bath slippers were on his feet.

The visiting neighbors also were dressed for comfort. The cow had just been tethered in the front yard and the yellow dog was howling mournfully, the guinea hens were crying alarm at a hawk and two youngsters were posted on posts at the entrance munching bread and butter, with a generous coating of brown sugar, when a big automobile drew up at the gate.

In it besides the driver were a tall, pleasant looking young man with a military carriage, and a much heavier figure garbed in a long gray duster and a soft gray cap. The pair started up the pathway. The bare-footed boys on the fence were curious, but not interested enough to drop the bread and butter when the big man patted one of them on the leg and wanted to know if Mr. Price was at home.

By that time Farmer Price had recognized his visitors and was advancing to meet the president of the United States. Major Archibald Butt was at the president's side. Mr. Taft announced that he had just run out to look over the farm and get away from official life for a while.

Escorted to the porch, he was introduced to Farmer Price's wife and all the neighbors and, settling himself in a comfortable armchair, he laughed and chatted for an hour or more.

HOW THE STATES TAX LARGE INTERESTS. TAFT RECEIVES REPORT

Commissioner of Corporations Reports to Taft.

REFERS TO THE CENTRAL EAST

Herbert Knox Smith Finds That General Property Tax For State Revenue Is Used Much More Extensively In That Section Than In the Middle Atlantic Division—Ohio Well at Head of Group In Methods Employed and Amount Collected.

Washington, July 31.—President Taft has received the latest report on state taxation of corporations, dealing with the eastern central states, as prepared by Commissioner of Corporations Herbert Knox Smith.

In speaking of the differences between the tax laws of the states, in the light of judicial decision, practical administration and revenue returns, Mr. Smith says:

"The eastern central group differs from the middle Atlantic group in using much more extensively the general property tax for state revenue. Wisconsin alone approaches a separation of sources of revenue, and its special taxes yield sufficient revenue for ordinary state expenses. Ohio applies special taxes and the general property tax to the same corporations for state purposes. Indiana and Illinois levy practically no special taxes on corporations."

"Michigan and Wisconsin make elaborate physical valuation of steam and street railway property, which, with earning capacity, forms the basis of state-administered ad valorem taxes. Reversing the tendency almost universal elsewhere, these two states have, with respect to the taxation of railroads, gone from the modern gross earnings method to the ad valorem tax. They also use extensively the 'average rate' method, i.e., applying to certain public service corporations a rate which is the average of the state and various local rates."

Adopt Ad Valorem System.

"Wisconsin derives about 71 per cent of its total state taxes from corporations: Ohio, 52 per cent; Indiana, 19 per cent; Illinois, 34 per cent. In Michigan, revenue from special corporation taxes is applied entirely to the school fund, and equals about 45 per cent of the total taxes collected by the state. The entire real and personal property of Wisconsin is annually valued for state purposes by a state commission."

The constitutions of three states in this group, namely, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois, prohibit the exemption of corporate property from the general property tax. Railroad and insurance companies are among the heaviest taxpayers in this group."

In speaking of Ohio, the commissioner has this to say:

"The total state revenue from taxation in 1909 was a little more than $10,000,000. Of this amount over 52 per cent was from corporations."

"State and local taxation of corporations is by the ad valorem method, supplemented by special methods of state taxation. Thus, in addition to the state tax on property, railroads pay on gross earnings; express, telegraph and telephone companies on gross receipts; and mercantile, manufacturing and miscellaneous corporations on capital stock."

What New Law Provides.

"While the rate of the capital stock tax is comparatively low, it yields about $1,200,000 annually. It is levied on the par value of issued capital stock of domestic corporations and on that portion of authorized capital stock of foreign corporations which is represented by property within the state."

"The new law of 1910 provides for the most highly centralized administration found in any of the states thus far studied. The state tax commission has wide administrative powers. It assesses the property of practically all public service corporations and apporitions its value among counties and local districts. It fixes the amount upon which the state collects taxes on corporate earnings and capital stock and has supervisory and administrative authority over local officials, with additional power to change local assessments upon its own initiative."

Laurier and Borden Make Reciprocity Statement.

ARE OPPOSED ON PROPOSITION

Premier Reviews Subject For Past Forty Years and Tells How Great Men Worked For Condition Now Brought About by Passage In Congress of Trade Agreement—Opposition Leader Glad Question Is to Be Submitted to People.

Ottawa, Ont., July 31.—With the statements issued by the rival leaders, Sir Wilfrid Laurier and R. L. Borden, the biggest political fight in Canada's history began. Sir Wilfrid never speaks for publication and the latest statement issued by him was three years ago. In his present statement, after referring to the history of the various attempts by all political parties in Canada to get reciprocity with the United States, he says:

"Within the last 12 months the president of the United States sent to Ottawa two commissioners from Washington for the purpose of opening negotiations looking toward the lowering of the tariff barriers which have hitherto stood in the way of free exchange of commodities between Canada and the United States. These negotiations, in January last, culminated in an agreement between the two governments by which the duties of each country in such products might be lowered or altogether removed."

"This agreement was strenuously resisted in the United States by various interests on the alleged ground that it was all to the advantage of Canada and to the detriment of the other country, but the view that it was mutually advantageous to both countries finally prevailed in congress, and the agreement stands today as an offer by the United States to Canada of that very measure of reciprocity which, for more than 40 years, has engaged the earnest and constant efforts of every leading Canadian statesman."

"The present Conservative party in parliament seeks absolutely to reverse the lifelong policy of its great leaders in the past, declaring that it will oppose to the bitter end the very principles enunciated by both Sir John Macdonald and Sir John Thompson in the last election addresses upon which each of these statesmen ever appealed to the Canadian people."

"Not content to debate this proposition on its merits, the Conservatives in the house of commons have adopted a system of organized and avowed obstruction to prevent any vote being taken in parliament by which the opinion of your representatives there could be expressed."

Mr. Borden in his statement says: "Apparently the government decided upon dissolution in a hurry or even in a panic. The Conservative party welcomes an appeal to the people on the great issue which has been under discussion in parliament. The president of the United States has more than once emphasized the fact that Canada is today at the parting of the ways. Those two ways lead in very divergent directions. The choice of the people will be fraught with momentous consequences to the future destiny of this country. The government has dissolved parliament without prorogation, without supply and without redistribution. Constitutional authorities abound to prove that dissolution ought not to be granted without provision of the necessary supplies for the public service."

Start For Camp Perry.

Columbus, O., July 31.—In command of Colonel B. L. Bargar, the Fourth Infantry, Ohio National Guard, left this morning over the Hocking Valley road for Camp Perry, to enjoy a week's encampment.

Collision Has Fatal Results.

Portsmouth, O., July 31.—Engineer James Downey, 23, was killed, and Conductor James Ring was injured in a rear-end collision between two Chesapeake & Ohio freight trains at Fire Brick, Ky.

Pictorial Phases of Reunion Of the Veterans of Bull Run

Photos copyright by American Press Association.

THERE were no fatalities in the "third battle of Bull Run" which took place on the fiftieth anniversary of the first great battle of the civil war. About 350 former Confederates and one-half that number of Union soldiers who took part in the first conflict were on the field again at the semicentennial celebration. They hobbled around over the battlefield—few of them were under seventy and many were past eighty and quite feeble—and pointed out the spots where they advanced or retreated a half century before. At noon the men lined up, those who had once worn the gray on one side and those who had worn the blue on the other, and at a signal advanced until they could shake hands, while a moving picture machine recorded the sentimental scene for all time. President Taft attended the reunion and made a brief address in which he held out the hope that such progress had been made toward universal peace that the danger of great wars in the future is slight. One picture above shows a group of veterans pointing out an interesting spot on the battlefield, while the other shows John Potter of Knoxville, Tenn., and Henry Bolton of Culpeper, Va., shaking hands at their first meeting since the battle of Bull Run, July 21, 1862.

OHIO RAILROADS WILL CONDUCT LECTURE TRAIN OPPORTUNITY FOR FARMERS

Noted Scientists Will Talk on Farm Topics.

Columbus, O., July 31.—An opportunity will be given Ohio farmers to obtain new pointers from experts of the Ohio State university's college of agriculture when several railroads run special trains over their lines. A corps of instructors from the university started this morning over the Big Four on the most extensive educational campaign ever conducted by special train, embracing six different railroad lines. The itinerary covers 27 days of lecturing at nearly 200 Ohio towns. In all the instructors will travel nearly 2,000 miles, carrying the gospel of better farming to thousands of farmers in the Buckeye state.

Starting on the Big Four, a special train will be conducted over that route until Aug. 7. Aug. 9 the Nickel Plate will run a similar train for three days, then Aug. 14 a six days' tour will begin on the C. H. & D. Beginning with the week of Aug. 21 the Panhandle and the Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern will run special agricultural trains.

The Baltimore & Ohio railroad will run a special from Akron to Pataskala, Aug. 21, 22 and 23.

Special instruction will be given in soil fertility, wheat culture and seed corn selection and illustrated literature will be distributed. Everything will be free and there will be nothing to advertise and nothing to sell on the train.

Grandstand Victim Dies.

Newark, O., July 31.—William Jennings, one of the men injured when the bleachers at the Newark baseball park collapsed, injuring a score, died here as a result of his injuries.

Killed Instantly Demanding Blackmail

Would-Be Victim Greets Him With Rain of Bullets.

Pittston, Pa., July 31.—Salvatore Amantello of New York city, who was shot and killed on the streets of this city by Carrello Samone, according to the story told the police by Samone, was a Black Hand agent, who had been demanding that he pay tribute for protection from the Black Hand. Samone says he shot Amantello because he knew his life was in danger. He was not at home when Amantello called, but his little girl soon found him and told him the stranger from New York was waiting to see him immediately.

Samone, fearful of some harm to his family, ran to his home and, seeing Amantello in the doorway, began shooting. He fired three shots, each bullet entering Amantello's body. He staggered into the street and fell dead across the car tracks. A policeman, who was only a few yards away when the shooting started, overpowered the murderer.

Samone was calm and told his story clearly. He said that he had been called upon for Black Hand tribute four times, and expected to be killed when he again refused. He was afraid Amantello would kill him.

LINCOLN LEGION REVIVAL INAUGURATED ON SUNDAY IN THE LOCAL CHURCHES

Speakers Saturday Evening in Open Air Meeting

ADDRESS LARGE AUDIENCES

Outline the Work to be Done During Present Week.

The Union Gospel Temperance Revival, under the auspices of the Lincoln Legion, was inaugurated in Washington C. H. Sunday morning, when the children of the Sunday schools and the church audiences were addressed by promoters of this splendid work.

Rev. Milo G. Kelser addressed a joint meeting of Grace M. E. church and the Presbyterian church, outlining the plan of the new movement, which is a branch of the Anti-Saloon League. As the other branch of the league attacks the saloon, this branch takes up the work of the league in the total abstinence movement among individuals.

It is the definite purpose to obtain from the youth of the country a million recruits to the temperance pledge during the year 1911, as a monument to the memory of Abraham Lincoln, the originator of the Lincoln pledge.

Rev. Swearingen addressed the Christian Sunday school and the audience at the First Baptist church. Both men are able speakers and aroused considerable interest. They made no attempt towards definite organization, merely presenting the movement and plans for future work.

In the evening both speakers spoke to a large out-door Union meeting on the Court House square.

There was estimated at from 300 to 500 people and the plan as outlined seemed to meet with approval.

It is expected that definite action will be taken in this temperance abstinence work in the near future.

Rev. Kelser, who delivered the principal address of the evening meeting, gave particularly gratifying reports from the dry cities and statistics showing that business and a dry town seemed to thrive together.

Muffled Danger Bell Death Nearly Results

Because some person with evil intent jammed a piece of lath into the warning bell at the B. & O. crossing on North street, an unknown man and woman were nearly caught by a train, barely escaping death under the big engine as it dashed by.

As it is a very serious offense to muffle a warning bell, or put it out of commission, two B. & O. detectives are now engaged in running the guilty party to earth, and if he is found, a severe lesson will be made of his crime, that others may take heed and leave warning bells alone.

New Hollander Is Bound Over

Harry Wood, arrested in New Holland last week and taken to Circleville to face a charge of grand larceny, having entered a residence in Circleville and removing a watch, diamond ring, money, etc., was arraigned before the Mayor at Circleville Saturday afternoon, and bound over to the grand jury.

In default of bond, Wood was placed in the county jail to await action of the grand jury at its next meeting.

ENJOYABLE SURPRISE.

Mr. George Cline, of Selden, was given a most enjoyable birthday surprise Sunday.

His brothers and sisters arrived with baskets that fairly groaned with good things and the day was spent out-doors, under the fine old shade trees, dinner served picnic fashion.

Those who were present included Mr. and Mrs. O. E. Cline and son, Howard, of Sabina; Mr. H. W. Wilson and family, of above town; Mr. and Mrs. Glen Wilson, of Austin; Mr. and Mrs. Jared Adams, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Cline and little daughter, Elizabeth, Miss Mary Cline, of this city.

TWO YOUNG LOVERS Steal a March on Friends. ARE MARRIED IN KENTUCKY

Mr. Thene McCoy, son of James McCoy, on the Staunton pike, and Miss Eva Rowe, stole a march on their friends by quietly slipping over to Covington, Ky., Saturday evening, securing a marriage license and having the nuptial knot tied Sunday.

For some time the young couple have been sweethearts, but the match was opposed because of the youth of the bride. Saturday afternoon Miss Rowe, who was a ward of Mrs. Nellie McLean, came to town on a shopping trip with Mrs. McLean.

Young McCoy secured an auto, captured his bride and drove to Hillsboro, where they took the traction for Cincinnati, and went over to Covington for the ceremony.

They returned to this city Monday morning and are making their home for the present with Mr. McCoy's father.

The bride is a sister of Mrs. Warren Hicks, of this city, and an extremely pretty girl.

Both young people have many friends in the town and county who will learn of their wedding with interest and surprise.

Here's Big One Greedy Grasshoppers Eat Fork Handles

A farmer who was in this city Saturday told of the grasshopper pest in his neighborhood, and said that the grasshoppers were so numerous that pitch-forks left in the hay field for a couple of days were gnawed so much by the grasshoppers that they were worthless. It is not uncommon for the grasshoppers to try their heavy jaws on fork handles, but this is the first instance reported where the insects actually rendered the fork handles worthless.

Baker's Traction Line Given Big Boost By Tax Commission

Saturday the last of the electric roads were heard by the Tax Commission and this week will be devoted to the work of valuing electric light and power plants, which in many cases are adjuncts to the electric railway properties. The increase in many of these will be as much as 1,000 per cent., and it is expected they will put up the most strenuous fight for reductions that has yet been encountered.

In spite of objections made by the traction interests of the state to the method used by the Tax Commission in fixing the taxable valuations of their property, the commission this morning received an indication that in all probability its figures and methods of applying them are nearly correct.

The new figures are, in some instances, five times that of the old, while the usual increase made by the Commission is only about four times. In spite of this the officials have appeared and told the Commission that its estimates are practically correct and they asked only for a change of some small items which will not materially affect the total.

Among the electric roads valued Saturday with last year's valuation and the Tax Commission's figures is the following:

Springfield and Washington C. H. Railway, $20,000 last year; $70,000 this year.

ISO IKOKO.

Iso Ikoko sat by the river Kongo. Iso was the son of a watch doctor. He watched the chattering monkeys hanging from the vine-covered trees. His body was greased with oil, and his little woolly curls were done up in clay. Iso was stylishly dressed, wearing bracelets and anklets of shell. The little fellow rolled his eyes in every direction, from the enormous sleeping crocodiles and various water birds to the white cranes floating like a great cloud across the sky.

Some day Iso would be a great watch doctor like his father and use his paraphernalia. Iso had inherited a great gift from a long line of ancestors. He had a wonderful voice, and could imitate the many sounds about him, from the cry of a bird or animal, to the hiss of a snake, or the rustles of a leaf. He spent much of his time with a naturalist who made his home with the Belgian officials, and often amused him with his voice. The naturalist wanted him to accompany him to a far away country and learn to sing beautiful songs. This would mean a great sacrifice to Ikoko, for he wanted to be a watch doctor.

Sidney Carter occupied an obscure seat in the great theater. In Carter's life there had been but one ambition. He loved music and his fellowman. His mind had ever been thrilled with strange and unaccountable melodies. He wanted the world to catch the music which echoed in his soul. He had hoped to do this himself. There was wealth at his command, but this was not enough. While he had trained under the best instructors, and his dreams seemed about to be realized, there had come the disappointment. His vocal cords had become paralyzed. The specialists gave him up. He could never become a world renowned tenor.

Despair and disappointment had resulted in a nervous breakdown. His doctor had advised travel. Perhaps a wise providence had guided the student's steps to Africa. He would soon know the worst, for he had invested in other talent. Patiently and secretly he had carried on his work until the bill boards had at last announced that Ikoko, the greatest of all tenors was to appear in New York.

It was a trying moment for Sidney Carter. If Ikoko failed, the disappointment would be hard to endure. He had spent much money on the venture. Iso's number was the next on the program. The audience was eager. They expected something. They did not even know how the tenor would look. As the Kongo youth stepped from behind the curtain there was a ripple of laughter. Ikoko smiled, and his ivory teeth were as white as the collar he wore. It was like a joke. There was the slanting forehead, the thick lips, and flat nostrils. Could this specimen be a musical prodigy.

Ikoko didn't notice the audience. This was the great occasion for which he had so long trained. He imagined that he was again among his people by the Kongo. He would think of them and the friend who had done so much for him. He waited a moment. The great theater was as silent as though it contained not a living soul. Then the hush was broken. The audience suddenly beheld a black athlete transformed into an artist of beauty and power. The effect of the singing defied analysis. It acted upon the souls of the audience. The music had a simple, yet sweet and agreeable quality unheard of. It was natural and esthetically beautiful. Its delicacy and tenderness was combined with richness of quality, volume and force. It was perfect melody and harmony, conveying emotion. Iso Ikoko bowed and passed behind the curtain.

The audience remained breathless. The people were waiting. They were thinking. They had not yet recovered from the spell. The song had impressed them. Then the silence was broken by loud and continued applause. Ikoko came back again and again. The house was wild in its demonstration. The manager hurried back to Sidney Carter. "Your fortune is made," he said. "Name your price." Carter's lips trembled with emotion. He was not thinking of the money, although he was glad it would be forthcoming. "I have at last been able to give to the world my songs," he murmured, as his face radiated his inner joy.—H. H. Hudson.

The Servant's Character.

A lady once gave the following, when questioned as to the character of her former servant: "Mary has been in my house two years—minus one year and 11 months; she has been very frugal—in work; mindful—of herself; prompt—in excuses; friendly—to men; faithful—to her lovers, and honest—when everything has vanished!"

A Follower of Nero.

Nero had just ordered the burning of Rome. "I got my idea from the janitor," he explained. "He always gives us plenty of steam the first warm days." Thus did he humbly follow in the footsteps of the great tyrant.

THE OHIO STATE FAIR

IS A GOOD BUSINESS PROPOSITION---ITS GROWTH IS MARVELOUS

The managers of the Ohio State Fair are both pleased and surprised. The demands for exhibit space so far in advance of the opening of the Fair is breaking all previous records. Hundreds of entries were received before the books opened, which is without precedent. From letters received at the Secretary's office it is learned that exhibitors will spend considerable money in making their exhibit booths attractive by tasteful decorations and novel devices of various kinds.

While the Fair is almost one month away, yet the officials are already compelled to arrange for overflow exhibits. The man who has any article or animal of real worth has come to recognize that the State Fair is a good advertiser for his wares. It is a common remark among farmers and others that before buying they will visit the State Fair and see the different exhibits in the line of goods or animals they wish to purchase.

Those in charge of the Fair, as well as the exhibitors are planning to make every Department more instructive than ever before. Contrasts and comparisons will be made to teach lessons, and inspire better methods. Many new lines of exhibits will appear this year. This indicates that business men are coming to realize the value of a state exposition.

Don't fail to read the Official Bulletin. Both the July and August issues. Valuable information in each. These Bulletins can be had free for the asking.

GOOD SERVICE—OHIO STATE FAIR BOOM.

Reports indicate, a record-breaking attendance at Ohio State Fair. Hundreds of fathers will this year bring the boys. Boys will stay on the farm longer and work better if they get some privileges and a few pleasures. In some counties parties are being organized to visit the Fair and the State institutions at Columbus. The Free Trip for Farm Boys has aroused great interest everywhere. Ten thousand information circulars are being mailed to parties over the state. Every boy in Ohio between the ages of fifteen and twenty has a chance and should try to secure this free trip to the State Fair, one entire week, and also see sights of the city. Railroads promise best of service.

Write to Secretary State Board of Agriculture, Columbus, for State Fair Premium List. Entries close August 12th.

WORTH THE MONEY.

Experiment Station Exhibit at Big State Fair.

To see and study the exhibit of the Ohio Experiment Station at the State Fair will be worth all the money it costs to come to the Fair. Director Thorne has made Ohio rank first in Experiment Stations. It is a mill that will help to grind out more prosperity for the State of Ohio than any other institution in it. Hundreds of people go to the expense of visiting Wooster for no other purpose than to see this Experiment station. Its great exhibit will be brought to the State Fair where all can see it along with the rest of the big exposition. In fact the work of the station will be so thoroughly arranged and compared at the Fair that even a better insight may be had of what it is doing than a visit at the Station. One hour's study of the instructive exhibit will be worth more than many times the cost of the trip. An able corps of instructors and lecturers will be on hand to explain and answer questions. Farmers who know its value should urge some of their indifferent neighbors to attend the Fair for the purpose of seeing and learning the lessons it teaches. State Fair begins the last Monday in August. Entries close August 12th. Do it now.

Mr. and Mrs. George Kelly and children, Mrs. Josie Kelly and Mr. Arthur Kelly, of Xenia, were motoring guests of Mr. and Mrs. Frank L. Stutson Sunday.

Mrs. D. T. McLean and little daughter returned Sunday afternoon from Cleveland, where Mrs. McLean has been visiting her sister, Mrs. Edward Fite.

Mrs. Claude Allen returned Monday morning to Richmond, Ind., accompanied by her daughter, Miss Jane Saxton, who will spend the rest of the summer with her.

Mrs. Mary Snyder has returned from a week's visit in London, and is a guest at the home of her father, Mr. James McLean, and brother, Mr. Charles McLean and wife.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Hettesheimer were motoring guests Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. Lon McCoy and Mr. and Mrs. Carey Baughn, who are camping on Paint creek near Bainbridge.

Mrs. Babb, after two months' treatment under Dr. Hazzard, returned to her home with her daughter, Mrs. Clyde Volden in New Vienna. Charlotte Hazzard accompanied her home for a visit.

Miss Anne Quinn went to Chillicothe Monday afternoon to be one of the guests at a house party at the home of her father, Mr. Clark Story. A number of society affairs are arranged for the guests.

Mrs. Minnie Brown returned Saturday night from Los Angeles, Cal., where she attended the N. E. A. convention, and an extended Western trip. Her son, Alfred, accompanied her down from Columbus to spend Sunday.

Mr. J. N. Van Denman, of Dayton, was the Sunday guest of Mrs. Oswald Smith and son, Jess. Mr. Van Denman leaves this week for the seashore to join his wife and accompany her to the summer home of Mr. Jos. McCoy, of New York, in Maine, for a two weeks' stay.

Twice in Same Place Columbus Boys Trowned. Largest Crowd of Season

By far the largest crowd which has ever seen the present Washington Baseball team caper around on the diamond, journeyed over to the Millwood Park yesterday afternoon and witnessed the local team gleefully trounce the Columbus Interurbans in two games.

At no stage of either game did the Capital City leaguers stack up in the same class with our boys.

It was agreed before hand that the whole string of nine innings would be played out in the first contest and that the second bout would be called at the end of the seventh session and it is well that the agreement was made, because the early showing of fondness by our boys for the south-paw slants fed to them by Flinger Hopkins, of Columbus, coming so soon after the trouncing administered in the first game, took the starch out of the visitors.

They played the second game very much like an old-maid plays hearts. However, the first session was a corker, featured by the pitching of both Kimbal and Conrad, with a shade to the local man who deserved to have a shut-out recorded in his favor. Columbus made two runs in the first inning, neither of which was earned. These two runs seemed to wake them up and from that time on until Columbus hopes vanished in the first half of the ninth, the "nothing doing" sign was hung out by our boys.

The Columbus ouch from first to last were eating out of Kimbal's hand.

Over 500 people paid to see the game.

The score:

First Game.

Circleville Wet Men Make Oath to Auditor To Quit the Booze Trade

Under glaring headlines of "Saloon Men Have All Made Oath to Auditor Dodd that They Have Discontinued Business," the Circleville Herald tells the story of how the "saloon men" in a town which has been dry (?) the past two years, have made oath that they have quit business.

The men were forced to quit business by the innumerable raids which have been made on their places of business, and in accordance with an agreement reached Thursday night between their attorneys and the Civic League. The Herald in speaking of the affair, says:

The first gun in favor of the Regulated Saloon was fired this morning when the saloon men of Circleville, to a man, went before County Auditor John A. Dodd and made oath that they had discontinued the sale of spirituous liquors on July 28th, 1911. (As stated exclusively in the Herald Friday.)

Marched Away Company M Leaves for Camp

With everything in almost perfect order, and making a splendid appearance, Company M, 4th regiment, O. N. G., left on the early morning train for Columbus on the way to Camp Perry for the annual camp at that point.

The company was fifty men strong, and each man carried his heavy equipment. They will return from camp in one week. Major Reil G. Allen and Battalion Adjutant Howard Allen, left Saturday evening.

McKitterick Machine Threshes 32,933 Bushels

If there is a thresher in Fayette county who can beat the record made by Thomas McKitterick, let him come forward with his figures. Mr. McKitterick has threshed an even 32,933 bushels, or, if wheat was worth 89c per bushel, about $26,346.40 worth.

Fayette county is filled with threshing machines, and few have more than a fifteen days' run.

ROSS COUNTY FARMER Unique Turnout Attraction DRIVES BULL TO TOWN

At Gillespieville in Ross county an unusual sight often greets the eyes of residents and visitors, and it is none other than a large shorthorn bull attached to a "buckboard", or open top buggy, and driven by the proud owner who sits on the seat and uses lines as one would drive a horse.

This peculiar outfit is a common sight in Gillespieville, and the farmer (if such he can be called) drives the bull to town because it is all he has to drive, and he is as proud of the animal as the average man would be of a thoroughbred roadster.

The man and his wife both ride in the rig, and it is said that the bull can strike a fairly good trot and make good time on the road.

FATE AT THE OPEN MEETING

"If Mrs. Peck has the cast iron nerve to recite 'College Oil Cans' at the open meeting of the Narcissus club tonight, I'm going to resign. I am indeed, 'Tact! That woman never heard of such a thing. At one of our open meetings, mother, she actually gave 'Curfew Shall Not Ring Tonight,' and added insult to injury by acting it out, rolling her eyes like a dying calf, and letting her hair down. I had invited Jack to go with me, and I thought I'd sink through the floor when she got up and began her maneuvers. Jack plagues me about it every time I mention the club, keeps asking me when we're going to have another open meeting says he wouldn't miss Mrs. Peck's stunt for anything. I told him if he could stand it I could, so he's going along tonight.

"One of the dearest, sweetest women in our club is Mrs. Roberts. You'd never imagine for a moment that she's worried to death over her husband, but she is. He was there. He didn't come with her, but staggered in after the program had begun. Mrs. Roberts was mortified to death over it. And then, what did that chicken-brained Mrs. Peck do but recite 'College Oil Cans.' She might just as well have pointed out Mr. Roberts as the horrible example. I thought my soul that Mrs. Roberts would sink through the floor. But it never fazed Mrs. Peck. Nothing could.

"Another thing, mother, Jack wants me to marry him. He insists on having his answer tonight. Yes, I know I could have Mr. DeQuincy any time I want him. I'd never have to worry then about whether I could afford to do what I wanted to. He doesn't look to be nearly so old as he really is, but he's got lots of money and he's liberal. Don't you think, mother, that I'd be happy with him? Yes, I know I've gone with Jack quite a while and he's taken me to almost everything, but it's quite another thing to marry him; besides, he hasn't such a very good position and it might be a long time before we could afford to live as I would like to. He says he expects a big advancement most any time now, but one can't depend on that."

"The open meeting was simply lovely, mother. Yes, Mrs. Peck was there—and she recited! I wish you could have heard her. It was fierce; oh, yes, lots worse than I imagined it would be, but we didn't let that bother us.

"On the way to the club Jack asked me whether I had made up my mind yet. I told him I had about made up my mind to marry Mr. DeQuincy. That got him going. While you were downtown this afternoon, Mr. DeQuincy came and took me out in his motor car. Yes, he asked me again, but I told him I would have to think about it.

"Last night, when Jack insisted that I say 'yes,' I told him I'd leave Fate decide. If Mrs. Peck gave 'College Oil Cans' I would know that I wasn't intended for him, but if it was 'Curfew Shall Not Ring Tonight' I would say 'yes.'

"No, Mrs. Peck didn't recite 'College Oil Cans' and it wasn't 'Curfew' either. It was 'Over the Hills to the Poorhouse'—it was, really—and I told Jack that's what it meant, my accepting him, and that there was no use fighting Fate.

"But he said Fate and Mrs. Peck didn't know what they were talking about, for he had just had a fine raise."

BOOSTING

our city is best done by every man making his business the very best. This will double or triple each business and the number of its employees. Such increase would boost our city as nothing else could. For instance: The Buckeye State Building and Loan Company, Rankin building, 22 West Gay street, Columbus, Ohio, is one of the best in its line. Hence its great growth. Assets $4,800,000. It pays 5 per cent. on time deposits.

THE SOLID GERMAN PEOPLE.

There is perhaps no people who excel, as a nation, in thoroughness, the Germans.

They are not, as we Americans understand it, a wide-awake pushing people, but everywhere that German goods are shipped, and everywhere that German plans, either with reference to the military or civil government, they carry with them the recommendation of thoroughness and perfection in every detail to a degree not reached by any other people. Every people who use the German goods and every nation which adopts the German plans, is profuse in praise of that thoroughness and perfection in detail which distinguishes the German product from all others.

The Germans are regarded in every nation of the civilized world as a valued addition to the population. They are, as a rule, boisterous but law abiding, and intensely jealous of their personal rights and exceedingly averse to too much governmental regulation.

That Japan has made wonderful progress is everywhere conceded and is a fact which is demonstrated by every step taken in the direction of science, art, literature, industry and commerce. Wideawake men are at the head of the various government portfolios, savants of international reputation head the institutions of learning, and in manufacture and trade the most up-to-date methods are being introduced.

But Japan cannot boast that this rapid civilization of the country came altogether from within. It required European teachers and seats of knowledge to instruct the Mikado's people in the ways of modern culture. And the German did more in this direction than any other nation. Just as they are in demand to build up armies and navies for the near East people, such as Turkey and Persia, and even for some of the South American republics, so Japan has discovered their worth, and nearly all universities and colleges in the Far East have one or two German instructors.

There can be no denial of the fact that the German people are a vast power for good in advancing the civilization of the world. They seem to be the happy medium—the balancing influence—between the more aggressive, dashing, hurry up people like our own people and the slow going, ultra conservatives like our English cousins.

"Made in Germany" is a badge of genuineness which passes without question in the world of commerce.

The opinion of German scientists generally passes without serious debate as the highest and best authority, and from the highest on down through the middle classes of mechanics and artisans to the laborers and servants, the Germans are preferred over all others.

It should not be inferred from these observations that the people of other nations do not possess many admirable traits and much high-class ability.

But, taking the people as a whole those people do not possess that solidity, that thoroughness and attention to detail—so to speak, which distinguishes the Germans.

The spectacular dash and the hurry-up energy, the ability to do things in a rush and pass on to other profitable pursuits—the imagination if you please—seem to be entirely lacking in the German make up.

POETRY
FOR TODAY

AN IDEALIST.

In his young boyhood God unto him sent An angel, one who, bearing from his skies Immortal gladness, breathed it on his eyes,
And laid upon his lips a sacrament.

Saying, "Behold, O child, to thee I give
That which nor time nor fear shall make its spoil,
The gift of love to hearten all thy toil,

Of beauty to be thine while thou
dost live."
And since that day, though fifty years have sped,
Though care full oft hath been his handmaiden,
And on his path pain's driving hurricane
Pale wreckage of his morning hopes hath spread.

Yet still with brow uplifted to the sun,
And mouth whereon an old love-sonnet sleeps,
His golden vision all undimmed he keeps,
And dreams of purple heights yet to be won.

Still with that morning wonder in his eyes,
Through teeming thoroughfare and
crowded mart,
He goes with unscathed soul and
gladsome heart,
Wise even as a little child is wise.

Olive Oil For Sunken Cheeks.

Sunken cheeks are apt to denote malnutrition of the body, and if that is the cause you need an internal remedy. Olive oil taken once or twice a day after meals and an occasional oil rub will be of benefit. A dessertspoonful of the oil taken in any medium which you may prefer will be the right dose, and if the oil rub is given at night you will find better results from it, as the skin has more time to absorb the oil.

AND THEY WERE

GOOD FRIENDS

"You an' him are kind of at outs, ain't you?" queried the man with the hoe.

"Me an' him?" said the man with the hoe in a surprised tone. "I sh'd say not. Bill an' me? Why we're the best kind o' friends. Who was tellin' you we was at outs?"

"I think it was Jack Briggs," replied the man with the hoe. "If I remember right, he said you an' Bill had some trouble a year or so ago about some money he claimed you owed him."

"Oh, that!" said the man with the hoe. "Sure, yes, we did have some trouble—at least he was the feller that had the most of the trouble, but that's all over and done with. I don't bear him no hard feelin's, an' if he's got anythin' against me he knows enough to keep his mouth shut."

"Did you pay him the money?"

"Who, me?" asked the man with the hoe. "Not on your life, I didn't. Why would I? I didn't owe him any money."

"What made him say you owed him money, then?" asked the man with the hoe.

"Maybe he thought if he claimed it I'd pay it," said the man with the hoe.
"I guess he thought I was easy. I am easy, too, but not easy enough for that."

"Do you mean to say he lied about it?" asked the man with the hoe.

"I certainly do," said the man with the hoe. "I mean to say he lied about it, an' I mean to say that I told him he lied about it an' that he knew he was lyin'. You bet he won't ever stop at a lie if he thinks he can make a nickel out of it. He's that kind of a feller. Yes, sir, he went around tellin' everybody he knew that I owed him $6.35 an' wouldn't pay it. Two or three of my friends came to me an' told me about it. I went to him an'
I rubbed my fist against his nose."

"You're givin' it out that I owe you money an' won't pay you," I says
"That's right," he says. "You owe me $6.35 an' I'd like to have you settle."

"Didn't I tell you once that I'd paid you all I ever owed you?" I says
"Didn't I tell you that you was a liar?"
"That doesn't make me so," he says. "I claim you owe me the money an' I want you to pay me."

"I handed him one on the side o'
the head an' told him to take it out o' that, an' he came back at me with a punch on the jaw an' told me that was the change I had comin'. That made me mad an' I sailed in an' gave him the darndest 'lickin' ever he had in his life. I guess I never did use a feller up worse'n I did him. When I got through with him I told him that if I ever heard of him slanderin' me again I'd come around an' give him another 'lickin'."

"That stopped him, did it?"

"No, that didn't stop him," replied the man with the hoe. "I had to give him another poundin' afore he quit.
You've noticed how his nose is kinder twisted to one side ain't you? Well, he got that from me, an' he deserved
it, the low-lived, contemptible bilk.
He'd worked that game on one or two fellers I know of, but I showed him he couldn't work it on me. I made him own he was a liar. But we've never had any trouble since then."

"I see," said the man with the hoe.
"Then you haven't got any hard feel-in's against him? You're good friends now, eh?"

"Sure," replied the man with the hoe. "Why wouldn't we be? I didn't pay him anythin'."

Doom of Newspapers.

The ingenious Mr. Wells has predicted a time when the day's news will be given to the world through the medium of gigantic mouther megaphones. There will be no writing, no reading in those happy days. Books will have been abolished, the gentle art of typesetting as forgotten as is today the secret of archaic Tyrian dyes. Those who lived by the pen perished by the pen (better say by the publishers). And what, we ask our startled reader, would be the consequences if all the libraries, Carnegian and otherwise, all the printing presses, all the paper, ink and scribblers were suddenly to vanish.

Such a condition may be easier imagined than described. Say, for an example, that a universal beneficent tyrant succeeded in abolishing books for a century; wouldn't his monument in enduring marble and gold be erected by admiring and succeeding generations? Instead of miles of obituary notices, wouldn't his effigy in ivory and diamonds pass from hand to hand as a thing sacred? The world has for so many centuries been dominated by the superstition of the printed word that the silencing of ink for at least 100 years would bring forth nations composed of thinkers and warriors.
Oculists would go out of business.
Teaching in the open air, in the manner of ancient Athens, would again find popular favor. The orator would top the novelist, and the Bryans and Roosevelts of that far-away epoch—reticent, tactful temperaments—would cast aside the pen for the speaking trumpet. Frabjous days, indeed!

Ill-Fed Pupils in Public Schools

By WELLS ANDREWS, M. D.

The first years of life should mainly be occupied by moral and physical training and during this period the amount of mental cultivation which a child's brain is capable of receiving with permanent advantage is much less than is commonly believed. No greater mistake is possible than the attempt to give any considerable degree of mental culture until there has been sufficient development of the physical stamina and moral faculties.

The organ of the mind is as much a part of the body as the hand and before either can function properly its vital force must be developed and maintained by nutrition.

A large proportion of those who must come within the provisions of a compulsory law in most large cities are ill fed children of the poorer classes and these ill fed children are debilitated by privation and are necessarily as much incapacitated for any mental strain as they are for the accomplishment of any feat of physical strength.

If, therefore, the state, for reasons of public policy, determines that all children shall be educated under compulsion from their earliest years, the state should afford the means by which this plan may be carried out with the least possible injury and the greatest possible good, by providing sufficient food as well as education for every child compelled to attend school. A great many children at too early an age are compelled to attend some school where the immature brain is forced into abnormal and disastrous activity.

Attempted Marriage Was A Failure

Couple United In Statehouse Rotunda Must Try Again.

Columbus, O., July 31.—It now appears that when Mr. John Jones of Corning and Miss Mary Eliza Smith of Caldwell thought they were being married under the dome of the statehouse Saturday morning, they were mistaken. It will be hard on Mary and John when the news gets to them, but legal sharps say if they expect their marriage to be other than a marriage at common law they should tie themselves back to the square and have the words said all over again.

The reason that the wedding isn't a wedding is just because Justice Ephraim Andrews of Corning, the one-armed squire who thought he was tying the knot, hadn't any right to do it. According to legal lights here a squire has no legal right to tie a matrimonial knot outside of his own territory.

Blames Black Hand For Shooting

Italian Shot From Ambush Says He Received Letters.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., July 31.—After receiving several Black Hand letters to which he paid no attention, Luigi Pupero, an Italian of Swoyersville, near here, was ambushed by three men near his home. Five shots were fired at him and one went through his body, penetrating his intestines. He is dying. He said that he had ignored letters sent him with the Black Hand signature demanding money and was sure that the three men were Black Hand agents. Frank Matrona and Thomas Falzonia have been arrested as suspects.

Five Are Lost In Gale

Fishing Crew, Captain and Four Sailors Missing.

Newport, R. I., July 31.—As a result of the gale that swept the New England coast, the 32-ton fishing schooner Nokomas, belonging to the Union Supply company of Boston, together with her captain and four of her crew, have been lost.

The men who lost their lives were: Captain John Pettipard and Louis Turner of Gloucester; Thomas Smith of Cape Negro, N. S.; Frank Dowe of Portland, Me.; and Sumner LeBall of Alibeth, N. S.

Man Is Burned In Mine

Comrades Start to Drill Seventy-Foot Rescue Hole.

Joplin, Mo., July 31.—More than 100 men and boys are working desperately in an effort to sink a shaft to the drift of the White Oak mine, east of Joplin, in which Joseph Clary, 21, is held a prisoner by caving ground. Days must elapse before the shaft can possibly reach the mine workings, which are 70 feet deep. A prospect drill is working frantically, sinking a six-inch hole which will let ventilation into the otherwise air-tight drift and through which food and drinking water can be lowered in case it is found the prisoner is still alive.

Clary and his mining pal were in the ground when dirt began to crumble from the sides of the shaft. One of the men was hoisted to the top, but no sooner had he stepped on solid ground than the shaft caved in with a roar. Clary is believed to have sought safety in the far corner of the drift, which is 40 feet long.

Suspect Negroes of Murder.

Columbus, O., July 31.—Two negroes are held at the city prison pending investigation as to their connection with the murder last spring of Carl Sanborn. They were arrested in connection with the assault of Mrs. Emma Rossnagel, who was mistreated and robbed in her home. Mrs. Rossnagel was unable to identify them as her assailants. At once Chief Carter began working on the new theory. He said that he might send for Mrs. Maud Estelle Hopper, who was with Sanborn when he was killed, and who told a story that she was mistreated at the time Sanborn was murdered.

Cruiser Sails From Germany

Norfolk, Va., July 31.—With orders to proceed to Haiti with all haste, the German cruiser Bremen steamed into Newport News from the sea and took on 1,000 tons of bunker coal to carry her for the long journey. The Bremen was off the Virginia coast when orders were received to proceed to the scene of trouble in Haiti to protect German interests. She passed out at daylight and expects to reach Haiti Wednesday morning, a day behind the American scout cruiser Salen, which sailed Saturday for Port-Au-Prince.

Three Killed at Toledo.

Toledo, O., July 31.—In a fit of jealous rage Anthony Rugiero shot and killed Mrs. Arthur D. Wiley. He then committed suicide. Mayor Allen's Announcement

On October 25th, 1909, near the close of the campaign for Mayor of the City of Washington, in the following published statement, I told the voters of this city where I stood, using this language:

"If elected Mayor, my purpose is to stop gambling and bootlegging in Washington and to do this without the fear or favor of any man or set of men. I shall use all the power of the office and the laws to give the people a clean, honest and faithful administration in every way. I have given no pledges to anybody up to this time, and my promise is now given to you in writing so that you may keep a record of what I agreed to do. A majority of the voters of this city have twice voted that intoxicating liquors shall not be sold here as a beverage, and their will shall be my guide."

Whether or not during the term of office to which I was elected at the close of that campaign, the pledges and promises then made have been kept, is not the subject of argument. My official conduct answers that question conclusively.

In the campaign of 1909, I promised the voters to do certain things if they would honor me with their votes. I now come before the voters of Washington on my record and ask at their hands a re-election.

It is not necessary to state what the record is. It is known to the voters of Washington and that record ought not need to be supplemented by promises. I asked the voters in that campaign to keep a record of my promises and check it up with my administration.

On the promises made in the campaign of 1909 and my record in office I ask the support of all the voters of Washington, who believe in the enforcement of law and order.

Sincerely yours,
RELL G. ALLEN.

"QUALITY" BREAD

USED WHERE THE BEST IS EATEN

It Is Our Pleasure

to inform you that we have arranged with the KRUG BAKERIES of Dayton, Ohio, to sell their well known and highly reputed line of breads.

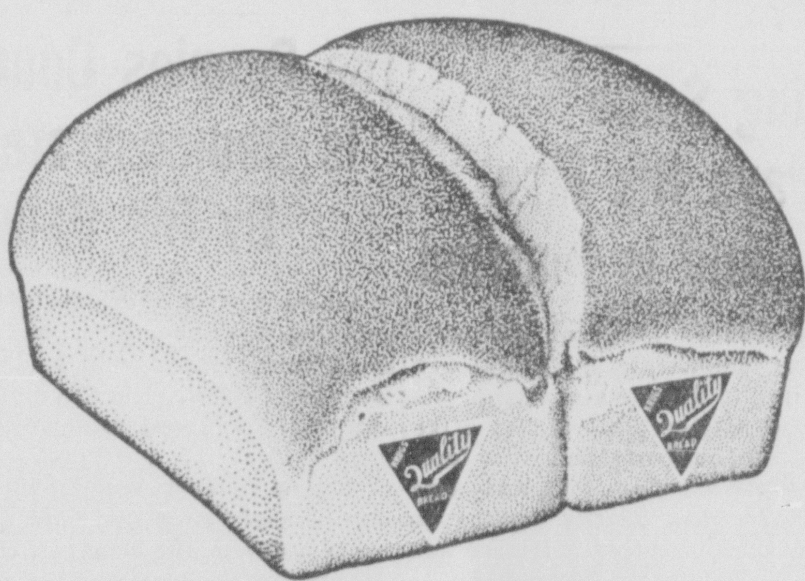

THE KRUG BAKERIES

operate the most sanitary and best equipped bakery in Ohio. Their reputation is such that a wide market has been found for their Quality and Butter-Krust breads throughout Ohio and Eastern Indiana.

Quality Bread is a pure malt bread, and for this reason is highly recommended by the medical profession, owing to its nutritious and health-giving properties as a food product.

Butter-Krust Bread is made with milk, which is guarantee enough of its palatability.

Both of these breads have met with high favor everywhere and are replacing the home-made loaf whenever tried.

THE PRICE.

Quality Bread sells for 5c a Loaf or six loaves for a quarter, if you take a quarter's worth at one time.

SAVE THE LABELS

The labels on Kruger's Breads are good for China, Silverware, Kitchen Utensils, Cut Glass, Vases, Bric-a-brac, etc.

If You Are Buying Bread

baked out of town we want you to try QUALITY, because we know its fresh, delicious, home-made taste will be a delightful surprise to you.

QUALITY Bread will please you because it pleases others. We know it pleases others because, starting with forty loaves a day, we have had to increase our order every few days until at present we are selling over 150 loaves a day.

An increase of over 350 per cent. in less than four months is surely a proof of goodness.

Try a Loaf of Quality Bread.

and if you don't think it the best you ever bought we will cheerfully refund your money.

If QUALITY was not the best bread sold in Washington Court House we could give you no such guarantee.

Heaps of Trouble Over Jonesboro Road Sign Wrong Place

More trouble over blocking the road at Jonesboro. This time the trouble grows out of the deed given by Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Andrews to the township trustees of Union township, and is a most peculiar one, and yet one which is rather laughable.

When Andrews fenced the road off because it was infringing upon his property, and the trustees paid him $50 for the land, a deed was drawn up and submitted for Andrews and his wife to sign. This deed was taken to the Andrews residence and Mr. and Mrs. Andrews both signed it, together with two witnesses.

When the deed was returned to this city it was found that the two witnesses had signed where the property owners should, and that Mr. and Mrs. Andrews had signed as witnesses. This raised the question of the legality of the document, and to be on the safe side, Andrews was asked to sign another deed, it is claimed, but refused to do so, and made some mention of wanting another $50 before he affixed his name to another deed.

The affair is being investigated, and if Andrews will not sign the new deed if the old one is held to be illegal, there will be something doing. However it is thought Andrews will cause no more trouble, as the price paid for the land is said to be a satisfactory one, and a refusal to give a good deed might be taken seriously.

MAN'S HORSE DIES BELONGED TO THE GYPSIES PULLS RIG HIMSELF

A queer outfit passed through the outskirts of this city and headed east a few days ago, and consisted of a young man, an old woman and a ramshackle spring wagon loaded with dirty bedding and other traps. The man was pulling the rig and the old lady was pushing, and those who saw it agree that the man was letting the bulk of work fall upon the old lady, whom he claimed to be his mother.

Both were dressed in rags of various colors, and both were barefooted, and about as disreputable looking a pair as could be found. They belonged to the gypsy camp located near Rock Mills, and claimed that their horse died three weeks ago and that they had been pulling the wagon since that time.

They stopped at one of the groceries and soon proved themselves to be expert beggars. When offered work on the Persinger farm east of this city, the man worked part of one day and quit, and the last seen of the pair they were headed toward New Holland, the woman pushing the wagon and the man holding the shafts.

CLAIMED A SURE GO SPRINGFIELD-CINCINNATI HUSTLE LOCAL PROJECT

The Springfield, Wilmington and Cincinnati traction line is now claimed to be a certainty, and actual construction work is expected to commence within sixty days, according to a report given out by G. H. Frey, the promoter who has been in the east finishing the road.

This may mean a line through this city at an earlier date than it would come if the Springfield to Cincinnati line were not constructed, for once the road is put through, it will not be a hard proposition to secure its extension to Columbus via this city.

Concerning the road, the Springfield Sun of Sunday, says:

G. H. Frey, Jr., arrived home from New York City yesterday morning and announced that he had been successful in financing his interurban railway project, which has been under consideration for some time.

Mr. Frey has not made public any of the details of the affair but said the financial end of the project was now entirely arranged and for this reason the proposed line between Springfield and Cincinnati, by way of Wilmington, is now a certainty.

Mr. Frey has been spending some time in New York conferring with prominent railroad men and financiers. The proposition was investigated by a number of engineers and railway experts who have decided that the road will be a safe proposition from all points of view. A number of surveys of the territory have been made and it is thought that the actual work of construction can be started within the next sixty days.

The new road is to be a modern electric line with a fast schedule of both freight and passenger trains. It will open up some new territory to Springfield merchants and will thus be of great benefit to that city. When completed the new line will offer direct connections from Springfield to Cincinnati.

Reciprocity's Effect On "Amber Fluid"

Brewers are looking with favor on the reciprocity activity, because barley is scheduled in the bill to come into the United States free of duty. Canada grows a tremendous quantity of the grain that makes malt, and grows a finer quality than is generally the case here. One of the drawbacks to larger profits in the recent past has been the high cost of malt.

During the first six months of 1911 the Cleveland and Sandusky Brewing Company sold 16,650 barrels of beer more than in the period last year. For the entire year of 1910 sales were 478,000 barrels; judging by the pace set by the first half of 1911, this year will see sales over 500,000 barrels. Not all the increase in sales will be apparent in profits, because of the recent high malt cost.

Otto Tritscheller Recognized Politician

A new deal has been sprung in Ross county Democratic circles, and the old wheel horse, Peter White Brown, who has served his party in many capacities, latterly as a member of the board of elections, is to step down and out.

Mr. Otto Tritscheller has been recommended to the Secretary of State to take Mr. Brown's place by the Democratic executive committee.

On the Republican side the time of Harry G. Howard expires and it is understood the committee has recommended his reappointment to the same office.

Mr. Tritscheller is well known in Washington and is very popular among the younger set. He is the husband of the former Miss Lella Hegler, one of Washington's popular society girls.

THE FICHTHORN BROTHERS IN FRIGHTFUL AUTO WRECK BETWEEN TROY AND PIQUA

In the Dusk of Evening and Dust of Another Machine

DID NOT NOTICE TURN IN PIKE

Plunged Headlong Into Ditch. Pinioned for Hours in the Wreckage.

Ewing G. Fichthorn and Allen R. Fichthorn, brothers, living at Millledgeville, were painfully hurt late Saturday evening when the auto in which they were riding left the road on a sharp turn of the pike between Troy and Piqua and plunged into a fence.

Allen R. Fichthorn was pinioned under the tonneau for more than an hour until men from a near-by farmhouse lifted the car from his body, but he escaped with only minor bruises. His brother sustained several bad cuts about the face.

Both men boarded a car and went to Dayton, where they were attended by a physician.

The car in which the brothers were riding was a complete wreck and the escape of the occupants from death was a miracle.

Mr. Lynn Hoppes saw both of the injured men in Dayton Saturday and Sunday and reports that Ewing was quite badly cut and bruised about the head.

Allen R. Fichthorn has gained a wide reputation in this section for speed and daring when driving his auto. Throughout this and adjoining counties he is known as "Barney Oldfield" Fichthorn.

Mr. Hoppes who went out in his own auto Sunday and assisted the Fichthorn brothers in bringing their wrecked auto into Dayton, says that they were compelled to tie ropes and wires to the machine and literally drag it behind his auto into Dayton.

The Fichthorn boys say that in the dusk of the evening they were passed on the pike by another machine going at high speed and the driver struck the wheel of their car.

They did not take kindly to being passed and thought still less of being bumped over on the road and accordingly "set sail" to pass the other auto.

The pace set was a furious one and in the dust of the front machine and gloom of the late evening, being unfamiliar with the road and the sharp turn at the point where the wreck occurred, they kept on at top speed, plunging off the road into the ditch.

Both men will recover, Mr. Hoppes came home today leaving the injured men in Dayton where they are receiving medical attention and looking after repairs of their machine.

The Pennies Count Is Demonstrated By Big Railway

A new method of demonstrating to employees the importance of saving small things is set forth by the Pere Marquette Railroad in the current issue of the railroad employees' magazine.

Where several other roads have shown their employees how 5 or 10 cents a day might be saved, the Pere Marquette presents a table showing the cost of various small articles commonly wasted, in terms of mileage for a ton of freight. This shows that every time a postage stamp is used needlessly the company must haul a ton of freight three and a half miles. Other similar examples are: Lead pencil, 2 miles; track spike, 2 miles; one lamp chimney, 10 1-2 miles; station broom, 35 miles; lantern, 100 miles; track shovel, 90 miles; 100 pounds of coal, 20 miles; one gallon engine oil, 50 miles.

Village "Cutups" Handcuff Newlyweds

Upon their return to Russel's Point near Bellefontaine Friday night, Captain and Mrs. John P. Maynard, recently married, were seized by a large delegation of friends and handcuffed together. The former clerk of the Ohio House of Representatives and his bride were then forced into an old wagon drawn by mules, and the procession paraded the village streets, amid the great hilarity of those who had them in charge.

Captain Maynard and his bride were just returning from the honeymoon, and took the affair with a good deal of humor.

"Going Some" Pays His Fine And is Married

When Andrew Hamilton was called before Magistrate L. G. Bull, in Cedarville, to answer a charge of assault and battery preferred by Mike McLaughlin, he took time by the forelock. When his fine of $5 and costs was handed out by the Justice he paid it, then produced a license and asked the Squire to marry him to the pretty little girl who had accompanied him to court. The girl was Miss Velma Elliott, and although the Squire was somewhat "fussed" over the sudden change in affairs, he was not long about tying the nuptial knot, and the couple left as happy and smiling as if nothing had occurred to mar their pre-nuptial bliss.

McLaughlin caused Hamilton's arrest when the latter resented being called a liar and struck him in the eye. McLaughlin thought he was entitled to part of the fine that Hamilton paid, and remarked, "The county wasn't hurt, it was me."—Xenia Daily Gazette.

Ohio's Automobiles May Reach 60,000

"There will be 60,000 automobiles in the state of Ohio next year, if the present ratio of increase keeps up," said Registrar Shearer Thursday morning. There are now over 41,000 licenses in force, and last year there were only 31,000. Before the season is over the number will have been boosted to 45,000 and the auto department ought to issue 60,000 licenses easily by the end of 1912."

This calculation is necessary at this time, as the contracts for furnishing the 1912 tags is about to be let. The bids will be opened next Tuesday. The contract is for 40,000 tags to be delivered by November 1, and as many more after that as the department may require. The 1912 tags will be white with green lettering.

Unknown Animal Kills Chickens

A few nights ago some unknown animal entered a chicken coop near the Lloyd elevator, and killed 72 chickens by biting them through the back.

A night or two after this same animal entered two more chicken coops and killed 24 in one and 16 in another. So far efforts to capture the marauder have been in vain.

COUGHING AND SCABBY HOGS.

Wormy, coughing, stunted hogs have been cured and made perfectly healthy by the use of one-fourth to one-half a box of Lye to a barrel of soaked corn, shorts or slops. This is the remedy of a Kansas man and he says it never fails.

Scabs on shoats are sometimes caused by a mite which causes the hair to fall off in patches. It may be cured by washing the skin with weak lye or soft soap, rubbed in with a brush. A wash containing 1 pound white arsenic, 12 pounds alum and 25 gallons of water gives good results.

Infested pens should be disinfected with hot kerosene emulsion or pure kerosene and liberal quantities of lime on the floor.

Her Dearest Wish.
Says the woman: "Oh, that mine enemy would let me trim a hat for her."

"Ten Dollars for a Fighting Man"

"TEN DOLLARS APIECE for fighting men!"
The speaker's tone was brisk and businesslike. Hatless and collarless, he stood in front of Charlie's waving in one hand a roll of yellow bills and repeating over and over again, in the same dry, matter of fact voice, his offer. His left eye was rapidly swelling shut and his forehead was bloody where it had been struck with something harder than a fist. A dress shirt, with the front scarcely mussed above the low vest, radiated in ironic contrast to his badly rumpled countenance. From within came the sound of overturning chairs and heavy curses.

"Ten dollars," he repeated monotonously. "Ten dollars apiece for fighting men."

Farquhar smiled. He had been a fighting man himself once. That, though, was before he had been found guilty in the minds of his fellow men of treachery on the grid-iron. It mattered little that the real culprit had been discovered 6 months later. Farquhar was gone then—gone in every sense of the word. Dorothy was gone also—gone out of his thoughts, out of his dreams—for she, too, had believed. He smiled, as has been said.

The young man in front of Charlie's repeated his invitation.

"Ten dollars apiece for fighting men." He raised his eyebrows inquiringly at Farquhar. Evidently he thought Farquhar was a fighter. "Ten dollars!" Farquhar gasped. Why, he could use that $10. He had been a fighter once; maybe there was a little left in him yet.

"I'll go you!" he exclaimed, suddenly.

"Step right inside," said the other, in the same monotonous voice, pointing at the door. "Here's your ten." Farquhar took it.

"Whom do I fight?"

"Any one you like." The tone still was indifferent. "Perhaps, though, you'll prefer to take the weaker side."

Farquhar banged the door open and was met with a heavy fist. Plainly they had been expecting him. He hit in the direction of the blow. There was a slap and some one went down. The momentary pause gave Farquhar a chance to take in the battlefield—a half dozen women huddled up in a corner, two men in dress suits fighting easily with four or five vicious faced hangers on, and two other men.

Even as he moved to join them he heard the door open again and realized that the cool voiced young man had procured more reinforcements. Then some one hit him and he swung his tremendous bulk into the center of the fight. All the latent world fury of months tore at his veins; he fought with grim recklessness, crashing his fists right and left. Before his ferocious charge the hangers on fell back. He seized a chair and, swinging it in wide circles, swept down upon them. Behind him came the two men who had been protecting the women and behind them the reinforcements. The cool voiced young man had been doing business. There were four of them and they looked ready for anything.

All together they whirled upon the hangers on and slammed them like pasteboard against the wall. It became a massacre. The cool voiced young man mounted a table and directed operations with demoniac joy. He seemed to feel that he had done his part of the fighting. The hangers on presently manifested nothing except a desire to get out. One by one they succeeded—generally accompanied by one of the reinforcements—until the whole fight had thus transferred outdoors.

In the ensuing silence Farquhar turned to the director general.

"Would you mind telling me," he panted, "what it's all about?"

"Wait until the police come," answered the young man. "They'll be here in a moment." Before he finished speaking the door opened and two officers sauntered in.

"All over?" they asked.

The young man waved his hand. "Quite over," he assured them, ironically. "You're perfectly safe. They scowled.

"Don't get funny," one cautioned. The young man disavowed any such intention.

"It was all very simple," he explained. "It seems these young women were slumming—a bad habit, officers, induced by co-ed courses in sociology—and came to Charlie's as a matter of course. Those two young men—the red headed one with his shirt torn off, and the fat one with the black eye—were their escorts. The lady now expiring in hysterics is, of course, the chaperon. Myself and these two other rowdies you see here were simply inspecting Charlie's—we do it quite frequently. There was the usual bunch of roughnecks present and some of them thought it would be funny to kid the girls. Then the boys got sore, and the red headed one—unadvisedly—biffed Sammy Lezinsky in the peeper. Then came the row." He yawned.

The officers nodded understandingly.

"But who is the big gink in the corner?" one of them asked, as an afterthought. In the quiet his words rang loudly. All eyes joined in an inspection of Farquhar. He flushed and started embarrassedly for the door. A little scream stopped him. One of the girls in the corner had arisen. "Wentworth," she said, clearly, "will you forgive me?" "His name," observed the young man, "appears to be Wentworth. I should say that he is about to become divine. I will also add that he is a good fighter."

WISE DONKEY.

Remarkable Intelligence of Show

Beast According to Manager.

"It's curious," said a theatrical manager who had experienced many ups and downs, "how the stage develops jealousies. I once had a show on the road in which it was necessary to make use of a horse and a donkey. We got the animals well trained for their parts and on the opening night they gave a first-class performance. On the following night, however, we were unable to get the donkey to move out of the wings. Prince, the horse, went on without any trouble whatever, but Jack—that was the name of the donkey—could neither be coaxed nor driven out before the foot lights. We finally had to go on with the performance with the donkey left out. After the show was over we got together and tried to find out what had been the matter. Nobody could offer an explanation until one of the stage hands happened to pick up a program, which showed that Prince's name was printed in the same kind of type we used for Jack. We got a new lot of programs the next day, with the donkey's name printed in type which was nearly twice as big as that which we used for the horse. After that we never had the slightest trouble."

Housekeepers in Demand.

A woman who must earn her living and is too advanced in years to secure a lucrative position in a store, is not debarred from good paying positions. If she is a careful housekeeper, she can take charge of some home, apartment or suite of rooms. Many men of means have their own homes and are only too desirous of obtaining the housekeeping services of a good trustworthy woman. The duties are not arduous; in fact, they are comparatively easy, and aside from the care of the house, the heaviest work being done by outside help, she may have little to do beside mending her employer's garments. One woman who came to St. Louis with only five cents in all this world accepted such a position and held it until her employer married. She says that any resourceful woman can do it.

The institutional homes offer excellent positions for matrons at the heads of various departments, in the school, sewing room and dining room. A middle-aged woman makes a most excellent nurse for the convalescent. It is seldom that a woman who is willing to be a nurse of this kind is without work.

Women living in rural districts who are desirous of coming into the city could not do better than to engage in industrial work at the outset while looking for other employment.

THOUGHT IT A FABLE.

Father of the Fair One—How can you possibly think of marrying my daughter? You say that by the strictest economy you can save only $10 a month!

Poor but Worthy Poet—Oh, yes; but if we both save, it will be $20.

NOTHING SERIOUS.

"I see your wife had to be carried to her carriage yesterday?"

"Yes; she had to be carried."

"What does the doctor say?"

"We have no doctor. The dressmaker says she made the gown a trifle too tight."

TIME SAVING—AT LEAST.

Mother (to little girl with swollen face)—But, Mabel, you should be brave and have your tooth taken out.

Little Brother—Yes, I should, Mabel; it will be one less for you to clean in the morning.

IN MOST CASES, TRUE.

"I was in hopes, when I married, that I could give my wife everything she wanted."

"Well?"

"I didn't think her yearning capacity would be so much greater than my earning capacity."

WHEN NOAH WAS A BOY.

Plant Guides Over Texas Prairies.

"There is a plant which grows on the vast Texas prairies which is as good as a compass," said Harry M. Topping of Galveston, Tex. "Down that way it is a well known fact that no matter what the weather, whether rain, sunshine, frost, blizzard or gale of wind, this hardy plant turns its leaves and flowers to the north."

"Horsemen traveling across the prairies always consult this plant, determine directions by it and follow its instructions, always certain that the plant will not mislead or deceive."

Bible Society Veteran.

A remarkable example of longevity of service in the case of a religious organization is forthcoming from the British and Foreign Bible society. Mr. James Seaby became the assistant secretary of the Lincolnshire auxiliary in the year 1848, and 40 years later succeeded to the secretaryship, a position he still holds. In recognition of this unparalleled tenure of office the committee have presented him with a specially bound copy of the Bible.

Dog's Good Sense Saved It.

In the big flood which recently pervaded the Almond Valley, near Perth, Scotland, a plowman suddenly remembered that he had left a dog in a shed. He hurried to its rescue and was gratified to find that the dog had shown the sense to get into a washing-tub, and was comfortably floating about in its ark.

Element of Danger to Society.

The real danger to modern institutions is not in the difference in the size of fortunes or that some live in mansions and others in huts. The real danger is that the current of sympathy which should circulate freely among the entire citizenship is obstructed.

Heaps of Trouble Over Jonesboro Road Sign Wrong Place

More trouble over blocking the road at Jonesboro. This time the trouble grows out of the deed given by Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Andrews to the township trustees of Union township, and is a most peculiar one, and yet one which is rather laughable.

When Andrews fenced the road off because it was infringing upon his property, and the trustees paid him $50 for the land, a deed was drawn up and submitted for Andrews and his wife to sign. This deed was taken to the Andrews residence and Mr. and Mrs. Andrews both signed it, together with two witnesses.

When the deed was returned to this city it was found that the two witnesses had signed where the property owners should, and that Mr. and Mrs. Andrews had signed as witnesses. This raised the question of the legality of the document, and to be on the safe side, Andrews was asked to sign another deed, it is claimed, but refused to do so, and made some mention of wanting another $50 before he affixed his name to another deed.

The affair is being investigated, and if Andrews will not sign the new deed if the old one is held to be illegal, there will be something doing. However it is thought Andrews will cause no more trouble, as the price paid for the land is said to be a satisfactory one, and a refusal to give a good deed might be taken seriously.

MAN'S HORSE DIES BELONGED TO THE GYPSIES PULLS RIG HIMSELF

A queer outfit passed through the outskirts of this city and headed east a few days ago, and consisted of a young man, an old woman and a ramshackle spring wagon loaded with dirty bedding and other traps. The man was pulling the rig and the old lady was pushing, and those who saw it agree that the man was letting the bulk of work fall upon the old lady, whom he claimed to be his mother.

Both were dressed in rags of various colors, and both were barefooted, and about as disreputable looking a pair as could be found. They belonged to the gypsy camp located near Rock Mills, and claimed that their horse died three weeks ago and that they had been pulling the wagon since that time.

They stopped at one of the groceries and soon proved themselves to be expert beggars. When offered work on the Persinger farm east of this city, the man worked part of one day and quit, and the last seen of the pair they were headed toward New Holland, the woman pushing the wagon and the man holding the shafts.

CLAIMED A SURE GO SPRINGFIELD-CINCINNATI HUSTLE LOCAL PROJECT

The Springfield, Wilmington and Cincinnati traction line is now claimed to be a certainty, and actual construction work is expected to commence within sixty days, according to a report given out by G. H. Frey, the promoter who has been in the east financing the road.

This may mean a line through this city at an earlier date than it would come if the Springfield to Cincinnati line were not constructed, for once the road is put through, it will not be a hard proposition to secure its extension to Columbus via this city.

Concerning the road, the Springfield Sun of Sunday, says:

G. H. Frey, Jr., arrived home from New York City yesterday morning and announced that he had been successful in financing his interurban railway project, which has been under consideration for some time.

Mr. Frey has not made public any of the details of the affair but said the financial end of the project was now entirely arranged and for this reason the proposed line between Springfield and Cincinnati, by way of Wilmington, is now a certainty.

Mr. Frey has been spending some time in New York conferring with prominent railroad men and financiers. The proposition was investigated by a number of engineers and railway experts who have decided that the road will be a safe proposition from all points of view. A number of surveys of the territory have been made and it is thought that the actual work of construction can be started within the next sixty days.

The new road is to be a modern electric line with a fast schedule of both freight and passenger trains. It will open up some new territory to Springfield merchants and will thus be of great benefit to that city. When completed the new line will offer direct connections from Springfield to Cincinnati.

Reciprocity's Effect On "Amber Fluid"

Brewers are looking with favor on the reciprocity activity, because barley is scheduled in the bill to come into the United States free of duty. Canada grows a tremendous quantity of the grain that makes malt, and grows a finer quality than is generally the case here. One of the drawbacks to larger profits in the recent past has been the high cost of malt.

During the first six months of 1911 the Cleveland and Sandusky Brewing Company sold 16,650 barrels of beer more than in the period last year. For the entire year of 1910 sales were 478,000 barrels; judging by the pace set by the first half of 1911, this year will see sales over 500,000 barrels. Not all the increase in sales will be apparent in profits, because of the recent high malt cost.

Otto Tritscheller Recognized Politician

A new deal has been sprung in Ross county Democratic circles, and the old wheel horse, Peter White Brown, who has served his party in many capacities, latterly as a member of the board of elections, is to step down and out.

Mr. Otto Tritscheller has been recommended to the Secretary of State to take Mr. Brown's place by the Democratic executive committee. On the Republican side the time of Harry G. Howard expires and it is understood the committee has recommended his reappointment to the same office.

Mr. Tritscheller is well known in Washington and is very popular among the younger set. He is the husband of the former Miss Lella Hegler, one of Washington's popular society girls.

THE FICHTHORN BROTHERS IN FRIGHTFUL AUTO WRECK BETWEEN TROY AND PIQUA

In the Dusk of Evening and Dust of Another Machine

DID NOT NOTICE TURN IN PIKE

Plunged Headlong Into Ditch.
Pinioned for Hours in the Wreckage.

Ewing G. Fichthorn and Allen R. Fichthorn, brothers, living at Milledgeville, were painfully hurt late Saturday evening when the auto in which they were riding left the road on a sharp turn of the pike between Troy and Piqua and plunged into a fence.

Allen R. Fichthorn was pinioned under the tonneau for more than an hour until men from a near-by farmhouse lifted the car from his body, but he escaped with only minor bruises. His brother sustained several bad cuts about the face.

Both men boarded a car and went to Dayton, where they were attended by a physician.

The car in which the brothers were riding was a complete wreck and the escape of the occupants from death was a miracle.

Mr. Lynn Hoppes saw both of the injured men in Dayton Saturday and Sunday and reports that Ewing was quite badly cut and bruised about the head.

Allen R. Fichthorn has gained a wide reputation in this section for speed and daring when driving his auto. Throughout this and adjoining counties he is known as "Barney Oldfield" Fichthorn.

Mr. Hoppes who went out in his own auto Sunday and assisted the Fichthorn brothers in bringing their wrecked auto into Dayton, says that they were compelled to tie ropes and wires to the machine and literally drag it behind his auto into Dayton.

The Fichthorn boys say that in the dusk of the evening they were passed on the pike by another machine going at high speed and the driver struck the wheel of their car.

They did not take kindly to being passed and thought still less of being bumped over on the road and accordingly "set sail" to pass the other auto.

The pace set was a furious one and in the dust of the front machine and gloom of the late evening, being unfamiliar with the road and the sharp turn at the point where the wreck occurred, they kept on at top speed, plunging off the road into the ditch.

Both men will recover. Mr. Hoppes came home today leaving the injured men in Dayton where they are receiving medical attention and looking after repairs of their machine.

The Pennies Count Is Demonstrated By Big Railway

A new method of demonstrating the importance of saving small things is set forth by the Pere Marquette Railroad in the current issue of the railroad employees' magazine.

Where several other roads have shown their employees how 5 or 10 cents a day might be saved, the Pere Marquette presents a table showing the cost of various small articles commonly wasted, in terms of mileage for a ton of freight. This shows that every time a postage stamp is used needlessly the company must haul a ton of freight three and a half miles. Other similar examples are: Lead pencil, 2 miles; track spike, 2 miles; one lamp chimney, 10 1-2 miles; station broom, 35 miles; lantern, 100 miles; track shovel, 90 miles; 100 pounds of coal, 20 miles; one gallon engine oil, 50 miles.

Village "Cutups" Handcuff Newlyweds

Upon their return to Russel's Point near Bellefontaine Friday night, Captain and Mrs. John P. Maynard, recently married, were seized by a large delegation of friends and handcuffed together. The former clerk of the Ohio House of Representatives and his bride were then forced into an old wagon drawn by mules, and the procession paraded the village streets, amid the great hilarity of those who had them in charge.

Captain Maynard and his wife were just returning from their honeymoon, and took the affair in the best of humor.

Husband Leaves Wife Asks Divorce

Sarah J. Gain broke the monotony in the Probate Court when she filed suit for divorce against her husband Lemuel H. Gain, alleging that she has been a dutiful wife, but Gain left her three years ago and has since been absent.

The couple were married in Jamestown on December 19th, but it is evident that the name Gain was misleading in its meaning.

Ohio's Automobiles May Reach 60,000

"There will be 60,000 automobiles in the state of Ohio next year, if the present ratio of increase keeps up," said Registrar Shearer Thursday morning. There are now over 41,000 licenses in force, and last year there were only 31,000. Before the season is over the number will have been boosted to 45,000 and the auto department ought to issue 60,000 licenses easily by the end of 1912."

This calculation is necessary at this time, as the contracts for furnishing the 1912 tags is about to be let. The bids will be opened next Tuesday. The contract is for 40,000 tags to be delivered by November 1, and as many more after that as the department may require. The 1912 tags will be white with green lettering.

Unknown Animal Kills Chickens

A few nights ago some unknown animal entered a chicken coop near the Lloyd elevator, and killed 72 chickens by biting them through the back.

A night or two after this same animal entered two more chicken coops and killed 24 in one and 16 in another. So far efforts to capture the marauder have been in vain.

COUGHING AND SCABBY HOGS.

Wormy, coughing, stunted hogs have been cured and made perfectly healthy by the use of one-fourth to one-half a box of Lye to a barrel of soaked corn, shorts or slops. This is the remedy of a Kansas man and he says it never fails.

Scabs on shoats are sometimes caused by a mite which causes the hair to fall off in patches. It may be cured by washing the skin with weak lye or soft soap, rubbed in with a brush. A wash containing 1 pound white arsenic, 12 pounds alum and 25 gallons of water gives good results.

Infested pens should be disinfected with hot kerosene emulsion or pure kerosene and liberal quantities of lime on the floor.

TOO EXPENSIVE.

"This cigar tastes like it was made of cabbage," growled the customer. "Huh!" replied the clerk. "If you knew the wholesale price of cabbage this year you wouldn't insinuate that it could be put in a 5 cent cigar."

Her Dearest Wish.

Says the woman: "Oh, that mine enemy would let me trim a hat for her."

"Ten Dollars for a Fighting Man"

"TEN DOLLARS APIECE for fighting men!"

The speaker's tone was brisk and businesslike. Hatless and collarless, he stood in front of Charlie's waving in one hand a roll of yellow bills and repeating over and over again, in the same dry, matter of fact voice, his offer. His left eye was rapidly swelling shut and his forehead was bloody where it had been struck with something harder than a fist. A dress shirt, with the front scarcely mussed above the low vest, radiated in ironic contrast to his badly rumpled countenance. From within came the sound of overturning chairs and heavy curses.

"Ten dollars," he repeated monotonously. "Ten dollars apiece for fighting men."

Farquhar smiled. He had been a fighting man himself once. That, though, was before he had been found guilty in the minds of his fellow men of treachery on the grid-iron. It mattered little that the real culprit had been discovered 6 months later. Farquhar was gone then—gone in every sense of the word. Dorothy was gone also—gone out of his thoughts, out of his dreams—for she, too, had believed. He smiled, as has been said.

The young man in front of Charlie's repeated his invitation.

"Ten dollars apiece for fighting men." He raised his eyebrows inquiringly at Farquhar. Evidently he thought Farquhar was a fighter. "Ten dollars!" Farquhar gasped. Why, he could use that $10. He had been a fighter once; maybe there was a little left in him yet.

"I'll go you!" he exclaimed, suddenly.

"Step right inside," said the other, in the same monotonous voice, pointing at the door. "Here's your ten." Farquhar took it.

"Whom do I fight?"

"Any one you like." The tone still was indifferent. "Perhaps, though, you'll prefer to take the weaker side."

Farquhar banged the door open and was met with a heavy fist. Plainly they had been expecting him. He hit in the direction of the blow. There was a slap and some one went down. The momentary pause gave Farquhar a chance to take in the battlefield—a half dozen women huddled up in a corner, two men in dress suits fighting easily with four or five vicious faced hangers on, and two other men.

Even as he moved to join them he heard the door open again and realized that the cool voiced young man had procured more reinforcements. Then some one hit him and he swung his tremendous bulk into the center of the fight. All the latent world fury of months tore at his veins; he fought with grim recklessness, crashing his fists right and left. Before his ferocious charge the hangers on fell back. He seized a chair and, swinging it in wide circles, swept down upon them. Behind him came the two men who had been protecting the women and behind them the reinforcements. The cool voiced young man had been doing business. There were four of them and they looked ready for anything.

All together they whirled upon the hangers on and slammed them like pasteboard against the wall. It became a massacre. The cool voiced young man mounted a table and directed operations with demoniac joy. He seemed to feel that he had done his part of the fighting. The hangers on presently manifested nothing except a desire to get out. One by one they succeeded—generally accompanied by one of the reinforcements—until the whole fight had thus transferred outdoors.

In the ensuing silence Farquhar turned to the director general.

"Would you mind telling me," he panted, "what it's all about?"

"Wait until the police come," answered the young man. "They'll be here in a moment." Before he finished speaking the door opened and two officers sauntered in.

"All over?" they asked.

The young man waved his hand. "Quite over," he assured them, ironically. "You're perfectly safe." They scowled.

"Don't get funny," one cautioned. The young man disavowed any such intention.

"It was all very simple," he explained. "It seems these young women were slumming—a bad habit, officers, induced by co-ed courses in sociology—and came to Charlie's as a matter of course. Those two young men—the red headed one with his shirt torn off, and the fat one with the black eye—were their escorts. The lady now expiring in hysterics is, of course, the chaperon. Myself and these two other rowdies you see here were simply inspecting Charlie's—we do it quite frequently. There was the usual bunch of roughnecks present and some of them thought it would be funny to kid the girls. Then the boys got sore, and the red headed one—unadvisedly—biffed Sammy Lezcinsky in the peeper. Then come the row." He yawned.

The officers nodded understandingly.

"But who is the big gink in the corner?" one of them asked, as a fight broke out in the corner.

HOUSEKEEPERS IN DEMAND.

A woman who must earn her living and is too advanced in years to secure a lucrative position in a store, is not debarrd from good paying positions. If she is a careful housekeeper, she can take charge of some house, apartment or suite of rooms. Many men of means have their own homes and are only too desirous of obtaining the housekeeping services of a good trustworthy woman. The duties are not arduous; in fact, they are comparatively easy, and aside from the care of the house, the heaviest work being done by outside help, she may have little to do beside mending her employer's garments. One woman who came to St. Louis with only five cents in all this world accepted such a position and held it until her employer married. She says that any resourceful woman can do it.

The institutional homes offer excellent positions for matrons at the heads of various departments, in the school, sewing room and dining room. A middle-aged woman makes a most excellent nurse for the convalescent. It is seldom that a woman who is willing to be a nurse of this kind is without work.

Women living in rural districts who are desirous of coming into the city could not do better than to engage in industrial work at the outset while looking for other employment.

REMARKABLE INTELLIGENCE OF SHOW BEAST ACCORDING TO MANAGER.

"It's curious," said a theatrical manager who had experienced many ups and downs, "how the stage develops jealousies. I once had a show on the road in which it was necessary to make use of a horse and a donkey. We got the animals well trained for their parts and on the opening night they gave a first-class performance. On the following night, however, we were unable to get the donkey to move out of the wings. Prince, the horse, went on without any trouble whatever, but Jack—that was the name of the donkey—could neither be coaxed nor driven out before the footlights. We finally had to go on with the performance with the donkey left out. After the show was over we got together and tried to find out what had been the matter. Nobody could offer an explanation until one of the stage hands happened to pick up a program, which showed that Prince's name was printed in the same kind of type we used for Jack. We got a new lot of programs the next day with the donkey's name printed in type which was nearly twice as big as that which we used for the horse. After that we never had the slightest trouble."

AEROPLANE FLIGHTS August 2 and 3 Wednesday and Thursday CLARK COUNTY FAIR Wednesday and Thursday At Springfield August 2 and 3 AEROPLANE FLIGHTS

The Clark County Fair Board has contracted with Aviator Shrieber, of New York City, to make two exhibition flights in his Baldwin Aeroplane Wednesday and Thursday of the big fair. Mr. Shrieber is a professional at the business, and has gained the fame of being one of the most successful aviators in the U. S., as well as the name of being the most daring aeroplane operator in the world. He will endeavor to break several of his previous records for height attained and difficult maneuvering during the engagement at Springfield. If you've never seen an aeroplane flight this is the opportunity of your life-time. If you have the exhibition of Mr. Shrieber will cause you to forget it. Two or more flights each day.

CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTIONS

BY PROF. C. B. GALBREATH, FORMER OHIO STATE LIBRARIAN.

(This is the first of a series of articles on Constitution Making by Prof. Galbreath to be printed in this newspaper.)

The movement for the early admission of Ohio into the Union had its origin in the partisan controversy between the Federal and Anti-Federal parties. General Arthur St. Clair, governor of the Northwest Territory and friend to Washington, Adams and Hamilton, represented the interests of the former on the western frontier; Edward Tiffin, Jeremiah Morrow and Thomas Worthington, all ardent supporters of Thomas Jefferson, were prominent leaders of the opposition. In the erection of a new state they sought the overthrow of St. Clair and the advancement of the interests of the Anti-Federal or Democratic party. Their zeal in this work was intensified by their antipathy to the personality of St. Clair, who was imperious and unfortunate in the manner of his rule.

Congress passed an enabling act providing for the erection of the new state, which was approved April 30, 1802. It fixed the boundaries of the state and provided for holding the constitutional convention, beginning the first Monday of the following November. The delegates were elected by the people. On the organization of the convention at Chillicothe, Edward Tiffin was chosen president. The sessions continued from the first to the twenty-ninth day of November. After determining, with but one dissenting vote, that it was expedient "to form a state constitution and government," the convention proceeded to frame a constitution, which became operative without submission to a vote of the people. The convention of thirty-five delegates was in session twenty-five days at an expense to the state of $4,554.75.

The partisan contest that hastened the admission of Ohio into the Union is reflected in the first constitution. Having disposed of St. Clair, the followers of Jefferson determined to guard against the "autocracy" of any future governor. This office, under the constitution "had more honor and dignity than power." The governor had no veto. Sovereign power was conferred chiefly upon the legislature, which had authority to elect judges and state officials as well as to make and repeal laws. It had also practically unlimited powers in the granting of charters to corporations. It is needless to observe that in these times there is no disposition to invest our General Assembly with such a measure of the sovereign power of the state.

In 1819, the question of holding a constitutional convention was submitted to the voters of the state, but the proposition was defeated by a majority of 22,328 in a total vote of 26,302.

Second Constitutional Convention.

The second constitutional convention was held in 1850-51. The constitution it framed is popularly known as the constitution of 1851.

Perhaps the most conspicuous and industrious advocate of this convention to frame a new constitution was Hon. Samuel Medary of Columbus, Ohio, editor of the Ohio Statesman, and one of the leading Democrats of the state. In the numerous editorials that he published on the subject are set forth the grounds on which he favored a new constitution. Among other things he claimed:

1. That the first constitution had been hastily and loosely drawn; that it had never been submitted to the people; that the state had outgrown the usefulness and limitations of that instrument.

2. That the judiciary system of the state should be thoroughly revised to the end that justice might be done without vexatious delays.

3. That sessions of the general assembly should be held biennially instead of annually.

4. That provision should be made requiring the general assembly to refer every measure increasing the state debt to a vote of the people.

5. That state officers, including judges, should be elected by the people.

The question of holding a constitutional convention was submitted to the people at the October election in 1849. The total vote cast at this election was 225,370; for the convention 145,698; against it 51,171. The legislature that met the following December made provision for the convention, the delegates to which were elected April 1, 1850.

As already stated, Mr. Medary was the chief advocate of a new constitution. It is said that along with his unselfish and patriotic desire to serve "the whole people" in this matter, he cherished a personal ambition to be a bright and shining light in this convention. He was therefore candidate for delegate from Franklin county. But, alas! the perversity of "the people." Remembering that it was the first day of April they gave Mr. Medary a surprise and elected over him Mr. John Graham, a surveyor. Medary was keenly disappointed.

The convention met in the capitol at Columbus May 6, 1850, where it continued in session until July 9 of the same year. It adjourned and met again in Cincinnati, Dec. 2, 1850, where it continued in session till March 10, 1851. William Medill presided. The convention was in session altogether 135 days, and cost the state $94,441.32. It numbered 109 delegates.

In due time the new constitution was framed and submitted to the people. It embraced most of the reforms advocated by its chief promoter and retained much that was good in the first constitution. In general it transferred sovereign power from the legislature to the people and required that laws for the regulation of corporations should be uniform in application. It conferred no additional power on the governor. It is the constitution under which we live today, but it has at various times been amended in some important particulars.

It was submitted to the people at the October election of 1851. The vote, excluding the counties of Deane and Auglaize, which did not report within the time limit, was as follows:

New constitution, Yes.....	125,641
New constitution, No.....	109,276

Majority for new constitution, 16,365
The license of the sale of intoxicating liquors was submitted as a separate proposition. The vote was as follows:

License to sell intoxicating liquors, No.....	113,237
License to sell intoxicating liquors, Yes.....	194,255

Majority against license, 8,018
Third Convention.

The third constitutional convention was presided over by Morrison R. Waite, afterwards Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States. Among its delegates were a number of men who won distinction. It met in Columbus, May 13, 1873, and continued in session in that city to August 8, 1873, when it adjourned to meet in Cincinnati, December 2, of the same year. Pursuant to adjournment it met in that city, where it concluded its labors May 15, 1874. The convention was in actual session 188 days. It cost the state $192,500.

The constitution submitted to the people contained a number of changes from the constitution of 1851, most of them of minor importance. These changes are set forth in detail in the Ohio State Journal of May 23, 1874. Many of them relate to legislative and judicial procedure.

The lieutenant governor was authorized to vote in cases of an equal division of the senate. The term of office of the supreme judges was extended to ten years and at the first election under this constitution no elector was to be permitted to vote for more than three of the five judges; this was designed to insure minority representation. The governor was given the veto power. Women were made eligible to any office under the school laws except that of the state commissioner of common schools. The fee system was to be abolished and county officers were to receive fixed salaries. The indebtedness of municipal corporations was limited to five per cent of the taxable property except on referendum vote. Provision was made for railroad regulation and the issuance of watered stock by corporations was prohibited. State and county officials were forbidden to accept railway passes and the general assembly was required to legislate for the protection of the lives and health of miners. Increased authority was granted to the general assembly in the matter of taxation. It was given power to frame rules of apportionment which should recognize a distinction between different kinds of property.

The constitution was submitted to the people in October, 1874, and was defeated by a vote of 250,169 to 102,585. Some of its provisions have since been adopted as amendments to the constitution.

In 1891, the people voted down the proposition of holding a constitutional convention. Total vote, 803,528; for the convention, 99,784; against it, 161,722. It will be noted that many electors did not vote at all on the proposition.

DELEGATE PETITIONS.

Blank forms for nominating candidates to the constitutional convention will have to be secured from county boards of elections. Candidates for these places are applying to the state secretary for the blanks, but the secretary of state will not supply them. Secretary Graves has sent forms to county boards of election and it is up to the local boards to furnish the blanks.

SAFE AND SANE.

Every citizen should be interested in a safe and sane constitutional convention and in securing the proper man for delegate from Knox county. A man who can be depended upon to give to every proposition the most careful and painstaking consideration, to the end that the people may secure a square deal, should be selected, if possible. It is a matter of vital importance.—Mt. Vernon Republican-News.

Curling Hair

If you would have your hair nice and shiny, yet not greasy and sticky, do this: At night, before you retire, comb your hair from all snarls first. Then break an egg and separate the yolk from the white. Pour in water to almost the bulk of the white. You may use toilet water or put a few drops of perfume into the water, or if you prefer you need not scent it. Then beat it until the water and egg are mixed. Separate your hair into small strands, dip your comb into the egg and moisten the hair; well, then twist the strand around until it is like a little rope. Next put a kid or whatever kind of curler you use at the end nearest the head, and wind the hair onto the curler. You need only do this every other night. It keeps the hair in curl beautifully, and if there is any trace of oil it immediately eradicates it. This also acts as a tonic to the hair. Your hair will look naturally wavy, and there will seem to be twice as much as usual.

Preserved Strawberries

Procure fresh large strawberries when in their prime, but not so ripe as to be soft. Hull them and weigh them; take an equal weight of sugar, make a sirup, and when boiling hot put in the berries. A small quantity only should be done at once. If crowded they will become mashed. Let them boil twenty minutes or a half hour, turn into tumblers or small jars and seal while hot. In pouring hot fruit into glass put a silver spoon in first; it will temper the glass and keep it from breaking. Do not use tin, iron, or pewter spoons for stirring fruit as they convert the color of red fruit into a dirty purple and impart besides a very unpleasant flavor.

Breakfast Dish

Pick the meat from around the bone of a boiled or baked ham and mince finely. Prepare the eggs in the usual way for scrambled eggs. Beat the eggs well, adding salt and a little milk. Then mix the minced ham in to the beaten eggs and scramble. Have some hot toast ready when the eggs are done. Cut the crusts from the toast, spread a little butter over each piece and pour the scrambled eggs and ham over the toast. This makes a delightful breakfast dish and is a splendid way of utilizing the last of the boiled ham.

Devil's Food Cake

Take yolks of two eggs, one cup of sugar, one tablespoonful of butter, one-half cup milk and a square of chocolate. Boil all till thick, and when cold add another one-half cup of sugar and one-half cup of milk. Sift one level teaspoonful of soda with a pinch of salt in one and one-half cups of flour. Mix all together and bake in loaf. Use chocolate frosting.

Oatmeal Gruel

Put two tablespoons oatmeal in small pan add a cup of sweet milk, and steam or boil it half an hour, then add small lump of butter, pinch of salt, sugar to taste, and another cup of milk and boil again for a few minutes. Use either warm or cold. It is nice for sick people that need nourishment in the night.

Muffins

One egg, 1 tablespoonful lard, pinch of salt, one cup of sweet milk, two scant cups of flour, one teaspoonful baking powder; mix well and bake in quick oven twenty minutes.

THE OUTLET

"WHEN WE WERE ABROAD"—
The Yapps are back from Yurrupe—
Eight weeks they've been abroading
And everything that's foreign
And outlandish they're applauding.
They're wearing baggy British tweeds,
Their speech is blurred by Scotch accents,
They've got our coinage all balled up
With francs or shillings, crowns and pence.
Bill Yapp he gabbles menu French
Just like a walking table d'hôte;
Ma Yapp talks of those abattoirs
Where she met artists of great note;
Sam Yapp tells of the Mason Rooze
And boasts the Caffy des Booze Arts,
While Maudie says the Mayonnaise,
As pheasants sang it, fired their hearts!

White Soup

To two quarts of boiling salted water, add three tablespoons of rice and one cup of finely broken vermicelli or spaghetti, simmer until tender, then add one cup of thin cream, and more salt if needed and a little white pepper. Beat the whites of two eggs stiff, place in the tureen and pour the soup over them.

Strawberry Jam

Use fine scarlet berries, weigh and boil them for 35 minutes, keeping them constantly stirred. Add eight ounces of good sugar to the pound of fruit, mix them well off the fire. Then boil again quickly for 25 minutes. Take off the scum and pour into jars or glasses.

May Rhubarb

Place a layer of cooked rhubarb in a crystal dish and cover with lady fingers, moisten with rhubarb juice; sprinkle in one-quarter pound of chopped preserved ginger and over all pour a good custard and garnish with whipped cream and strips of angelica.

Johnny Cake

One egg, three cups sour milk, one and one-half teaspoonfuls soda, two tablespoons of lard, one tablespoonful salt, two cups flour; the rest of cornmeal to make quite stiff. Bake, half an hour.

"Look here, my lad, we don't like our youngsters in this business; look too sporting. Your trousers are too light."

"These? Why, they are a make-up of two of mother's old skirts." The Pink 'Un.

Braised Beef Heart.

Soak the heart in cold water then cleanse very thoroughly that no blood clots may be overlooked. Trim off the tough muscle from the top and fill the center with a savory stuffing. Brown quickly in a little hot fat, turning from side to side until evenly and well colored. Transfer to a deep dish, add two-thirds of a pint of good gravy, or, strained tomatoes and braise in a slow oven for three hours.

Eliza's Baked Onions

Boil four Bermuda onions about ten minutes. When cool remove the centers. Chop about three of the centers with 10 cents' worth of cold boiled ham. Mix this with some buttered bread crumbs and stuff onions with this. Place in pan, putting a lump of butter on top of each. Make about one and one-half cups of rather thin white sauce and pour around onions. Bake covered forty-five minutes, remove cover, sprinkle with buttered crumbs, and brown fifteen minutes.

Popovers

One egg, well beaten, 1 cup milk, 1 small teaspoon salt, 1 cup flour. Pour into hot gem pans and bake in quick oven.

When putting up preserves use three teaspoonfuls to every pound of fruit; it will keep the sugar from fermenting and also form crystallizing.

"Ever been locked up?" demanded counsel.
"I have been," admitted the witness.
"Aha! And what had you been doing to get yourself locked up?"
"I had been doing jury duty."
